Join us for the inaugural three-day conference to explore the management of problematic surgical outcomes in patients with Hirschsprung, anorectal malformations, and other pediatric colorectal problems. The conference will involve didactic presentations, case studies and hands-on sessions to cover a wide range of colorectal conditions.

This comprehensive course is led by Internationally-renowned colorectal surgeon Luis De la Torre, MD, developer of the innovative De la Torre Technique, a less invasive approach to the surgical correction of Hirschsprung disease. Dr. De la Torre is the founding director of the Colorectal Center for Children at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh of UPMC. He is an Associate Professor of Surgery at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine. Dr. De la Torre is from Puebla, Mexico, where he was founding director of the Colorectal Center for Children at the children's hospital there.

Who Should Attend

This course is designed for pediatric surgeons, pediatric gastroenterologists, pediatric urologists, pediatric nurses, nurse practitioners, and trainees who care for children with Hirschsprung's disease, anorectal malformations, and other pediatric colorectal conditions.

Learning Objectives

- Adequate workup for the precise diagnosis of the different colorectal functional problems in patients with Hirschsprung or anorectal malformations after the pull-through, and idiopathic constipation
- Identification of the different areas of the anal canal in normal patients, patients with an adequate pull-through, and patients with an inadequate pull-through, to determine possible fecal incontinence
- Rational practice of the bowel management program for patients with fecal incontinence, colitis (enterocolitis), pseudo-fecal incontinence, constipation associated to imperforate anus and Hirschsprung, and chronic idiopathic constipation
